During a recent departure from Essex County Airport in Caldwell, New Jersey, the tower controller must have been frazzled with intensive student training in the pattern:

Tower: Bonanza Seven Zero Mike Romeo, contact New York departure and have a good flight.
Bonanza: Bonanza Zero Mike Romeo. Have a nice day.
Tower: It's too late for that.

Returning home from the West Coast a few years ago, we landed in Flint, Mich. The Midwest had had weeks of rain and overcast skies that summer, and I got this on departure:

"Bonanza Five Four Seven Zero Victor, when you get on top, would you look out to the southeast and tell me if you see a big bright light?"

When I was learning to fly in 1967 in Merced, Calif., we had no control tower. We were taught that after engine start-up, we should pretend to call the tower for taxi clearance.

Another pilot trainee started his engine, then immediately started to taxi. The instructor stopped him and advised that he had forgotten to call for clearance. The trainee thought for a second, opened the pilot air vent, and, over the roar of the engine, yelled, "Clear!"

Dear Friends:

On behalf of the parishioners of St. Theresa's Church, and those who come to our Food Pantry for assistance, I wish to thank you for your generous donation of 50 nonperishable food items which helps us feed the needy of our community this holiday season.

Because of your donations, our Food Pantry has been able to keep our shelves well stocked and provide nutrition to distressed families who come to us when their cupboards are empty. The Rhode Island Pilots Association has helped us fill those needs and for that, we are most grateful.

Families from the community are blessed by your thoughtfulness. Thank you again for your generosity and support to our food pantry.

Sincerely yours,
